Fallen Angels is the 37th studio album by Bob Dylan, released by Columbia Records on May 20, 2016. The album consists of cover versions of twelve classic American songs chosen by Dylan from a diverse array of writers such as Johnny Mercer, Harold Arlen, Sammy Cahn and Carolyn Leigh. Much like the album's predecessor, Shadows in the Night, every song on the album, except for "Skylark", was once recorded by Frank Sinatra. The album has received generally favorable reviews from critics, with

Three angels up above the street
Each one playing a horn
Dressed in green robes with wings that stick out
They've been there since Christmas morn
The wildest cat from Montana passes by in a flash
Then a lady in a bright orange dress
One U-Haul trailer, a truck with no wheels
The Tenth Avenue bus going west

I had the luck to hear a recent Bob Dylan concert and had a bit of an epiphany in regard to Bob Dylan music and where Fallen Angels fits in. Dylan is currently touring doing a few songs from Fallen Angels and mostly songs from albums he has done post 2000. In this context the new songs made total sense and really helped me appreciate the new album.

One of these was Hal Miller & The Rays "An Angel Cried", a song co-written by The Four Seasons' Bob Gaudio that was recorded in 1961. The Four Seasons laid down their own version three years later, for their Rag Doll album. One morning in the first half of 2018, Ariana Grande woke up with this song in her head.
